

Gateways

Trevor Williams is a young writer looking for inspiration for a novel. However, unlike others Trevor has the ability to envision a location and open up a gateway leading to it. He finds himself drifting through the streets of Sheffield wondering what else could be out there.

After seeing a bus pass by claiming to be travelling out through the Peak District, Trevor decides to open up a gateway leading to a place out in the Peak District. After which, he finds himself immersed in the open space and suddenly he feels uplifted as the shadow of the city hanging over him disappears.

Trevor begins opening gateways across the fields of grass and passing from one to the other mesmerised by the sights he sees.

After his day of exploring the great outdoors Trevor decides it is time to return home and opens a gateway back to the city centre. He then walks away and blends in with the crowd now enlightened and ready to write his story.
